

THREE WORLD'S RECORDS ARE SMASHED

Duke Kahanamoku and Cunha Make Aquatic History

Mighty Mermen Churn Water In Marvelous Time While Spectators Gasp With Wonder—Wee Mitrie Konowloff New Star In Juvenile Class—Healanis Win First Meet

(From Saturday Advertiser.)

Churning through the waters of the harbor between piers Six and Seven yesterday morning and afternoon at one time or other during the annual swimming meet of the Hawaiian branch of the Amateur Athletic Union, Duke P. Kahanamoku and George Cunha established their rights as the greatest mermen of the world, for each of them hung up new marks for competitors to try for and in each instant the time made, left no doubt as to their superiority over all swimmers. Others taking part in the meet acquitted themselves creditably but these two stood out far and away above all others.

To Kahanamoku goes the honor of smashing the record for the 50 yards dash, for smashing the record at the 100 yards while Kahanamoku and George Cunha swam the 220 yards at a terrific pace finishing at the wire neck and neck and in the remarkable time of two minutes and twenty-five seconds, two-fifths of a second faster than the time of William Longworth, the Australia crack and a record which has stood for years. In the fifty-yard dash, Kahanamoku covered the distance in twenty-three seconds flat, two-fifths of a second faster than his previous accomplishment at the distance and in the 100 yards, he finished first in fifty-three and one-fifth seconds, two-fifths of a second faster than his previous record.

George Cunha's remarkable performance was in the 220 yards swim and in the final dash of the relay. Here he swam shoulder to shoulder with the mighty Duke and never once did the champion of champions gain an inch on the Healanis man. It was a nerve-racking, grueling test of skill and heart and all honor is due both men for the fight they put up.

Still all the plaudits of winning the relay must go to Cunha. Game Stubby Kruger, who swam the next to last dash, outgamed and outswam Dick Holstein and paved the way for Cunha to start on the last lap, a fraction of a yard in advance of the mighty Duke.

With the big fellows in the earning of fame was Mitrie Konowloff, a wee bit of a Russian lad who goes into the ocean at the beach before breakfast and only comes out when the dinner bell rings. Mitrie is to be eleven years old his next birthday and when he stands beside his team mates, one does not know he is there. Mitrie is wide of shoulders though and powerful of limb and in the fifty yards dash and also in the seventy-five yards dash, little Mitrie went out in front at the crack of the starter's gun and was never behind.

William Rowat of the Healanis, another novice showed his heels to his field in the 220 yards dash and swam a creditable race. Marion Perry of the same club also turned up winner in the one mile swim, leading such men as Wilhelm, Vincent Genovos and William Hollinger in easy victory.

In the high diving and the springboard diving the Healanis had their own way. Whittle, Fuller and Birt scoring enough points to make victory certain for the Blue and White.

Great is the feeling of exultation with the Healanis, for winning yesterday's meet and likewise the relay race, the Blue and White swimmers annexed their first cups for each event. In the sum total of points, the Healanis scored 60, the Hui Nalu 48, the Myrtles 6, and the Outrigger Canoe Club 3.

In the women's events but two entries faced the starter in the fifty yards dash, Miss Ruth Stucker being confined at home owing to a sudden illness, the two competitors being Miss Lucille Legros and Miss Bernice Lane. Miss Legros proved the winner after a spirited race with Miss Lane. The protégé of Duke Kahanamoku showed a vast improvement over her previous starts and when it was announced that she had covered the distance in thirty-two and two-fifths seconds, two-fifths of a second better than the time of Miss Francis Cowles, the Coast champion, and had brought the title back to Honolulu, a mighty cheer rent the air.

Miss Legros outswam both Mrs. G. H. Paul and Miss Edith Kibling in the 220 yards and her time 03:42.5, the A. U. record for this distance and will remain as such until some one should lower the mark. That Miss Legros is rapidly developing into a swimmer of rare worth was the opinion of several experts present at the meet and it has been suggested that she be sent to San Francisco next month as the Hawaiian representative in the Pan-Pacific International Exposition championship events.

Duke Wins Opener
With little or no delay the meet started within a few moments past ten o'clock, the 440 yards swim being first on the program. Duke took the water in clever style and at once went to the front. Never once was he forced to extend himself and this accounts for his slow time. Stubby Kruger raced well for several yards with Frederick Wilhelm but soon drew away from the Hui Nalu man and finished second easily. David Kahanamoku was also a starter but dropped out at the 200 yard mark.

Closely following this event came the fifty yards for women with the 100 yards dash for novices next. Clarence Hurley earned the brackets in this event with Marion Perry close up. Perry though committed an infraction of the rules and was disqualified, second place going to R. Carter of the Myrtles. Next on the program was the fifty-yard dash. A fair field faced the starter, prominently being Duke, George Cunha and Clarence Lane, and this was one of the prettiest races of the meet, on to a perfect start, the three swimmers swam shoulder to shoulder to the tape, Kahanamoku finishing less than a hand in front of Cunha, with Lane a hand-line third. Duke broke his previous records for the distance and it is unfortunate that Cunha cannot also get credit for smashing the mark, for this he surely did.

After little Mitrie had beaten his field in the fifty yard dash for boys, the 580 yards swim took place and Kahanamoku turned up a winner here, much to the surprise of the spectators, who feared he could not go the whole distance. Herbert Brundage of the Myrtles was a distant second and William Hollinger third. Frederick Wilhelm, the holder of the record for the distance, finished absolutely last.

Fuller Is Best Diver
R. K. Fuller of the Healanis scored high in the springboard diving, with A. H. Tarleton of the Outriggers second and Whittle of the Healanis third. Harold Lishman was unable to do justice to himself owing to an injury received in his first lap from the board.

Following the diving, came the 100-yard dash and again Kahanamoku was the winner, in fact, a wonderful race, Duke being forced to put every ounce of muscle into action to nose out the Healanis man. Lane finished third, close up to Cunha.

In the next event, we Mitrie again came home in front and today is proudly wearing two medals on his manly little breast.
Lawrence Cunha distanced the field in the 150 yards back stroke, with Duke Kahanamoku and Allen Cunha at a dead heat for second place.

Miss Legros had little trouble winning the 220 yard dash for women swimmers, and following this event William Rowat scored in the 220-yard dash for novices.

Breast Stroke New
Duke P. Kahanamoku finished first in the 200 yards breast stroke, swimming even and true throughout the entire distance. George Keawamahi finished second and Robert Kawaia third. These three men seemed to be the only entries familiar with the style of swimming, all others violating the rules time and again, several of them being disqualified.

Marion Perry was a winner of the one-mile swim, defeating Wilhelm, the title holder, easily. With William Hollinger third, Wilhelm was far below his usual form and swam a disappointing race. Vincent Genovos was also below form and stopped after covering half the distance.

After the high dive, which was a walkover for the Healanis divers, Birt, Fuller and Whittle, Duke Kahanamoku, once again, George Cunha and Stubby Kruger faced the starter for the 220-yard dash. This was one of the greatest races in the history of the A. U. In Honolulu. On to a perfect start, Cunha and Kahanamoku swam shoulder to shoulder from large to large, coming back toward the starting point, Duke advanced a head over the Healanis man. Then Cunha spurred, and down the lane in the last twenty yards they raced and the right hand of Duke and the left hand of Cunha hit the tape at the same time.

Next came the plunge, a long draw out affair, which was won by Bert

This City Would Be Greatly Interested If War Should Come

While Some Powers Have Allowed Bottoms To Depart In Case of Hostilities Other Nations Have Grabbed Them As Prizes

Honolulu would be interested intensely in the disposition of German merchantmen now in port if war were declared between the United States and Germany. Two courses of action immediately suggest themselves: to seize the ships at once or to give them opportunity to depart.

Neither of these would be open to the gunboat Geier, or the Lockman, both of which are interned. The obligations of the United States existing at the present time are such as to force these vessels to remain here, regardless of the possibility of this nation becoming a belligerent.

Old customs emphatically favored permitting merchantmen to depart. Present customs emphatically favor seizing them at once. In the Spanish-American war, what seem strange, old-fashioned formalities were observed, and merchant ships were permitted to depart, being given, in fact, several days. According to the recollection of naval officers here, this was a weak point.

Japan Makes History
But Japan, which went to war in Manchuria without a formal declaration, made history by that act, and her policy seems to have been followed in this war. Germany, for example, detained British merchantmen as early as August 1, although the final British demand for Germany to respect the neutrality of Belgium, which was, in fact, an ultimatum and which virtually was equivalent to a declaration of war, was not sent until the evening of August 4.

"I believe it would be the policy of this administration to permit the ships to depart, although everyone knows they have no place to go," said a man in touch with international law developments. "Old customs would be followed, I believe," and then he cited the beginning of the Spanish-American war. So far as he knew, he said, there was no formal treaty on this question.

If the administration does take this view, it might feel a moral responsibility to permit the Germans to depart because of the circumstances of their arrival and stay: refugees from belligerent men-of-war.

That the administration will do this is indicated by the current issue of the Nautical Gazette, which says: "There is little doubt in certain quarters that the German craft would be first ordered out of American ports." Of course, they would be subject to capture by American men-of-war after a time limit, if one were set, and the big fact, that Germany would lose the ships, would not be altered in the least. Warships of the Allies would seize them if America did not.

There Are Precedents
There are precedents in international practice for permitting merchant vessels to depart from ports. In 1761, the elder Pitt resigned because his colleagues would not authorize seizure of Spanish merchantmen in English harbors. Pitt urged that Spain was about to make war upon England, but the cabinet would not approve of his suggestion.

When the Crimean war broke out in the '50s, six weeks was given, and, in the case of Russian White Sea ports, the days of grace extended from the breaking up of ice. Concessions of like character were made by France and Germany in 1870 and by Russia and Turkey in 1877.

Although Japan's fleet attacked the Russians at Port Arthur, February 9, 1904, a day before the formal declaration of war, and the treaty set a precedent, the Japanese action on the declaration of war against Germany last year was in strong contrast to that of European nations.

Japan declared war on Germany August 23, 1914, after Germany had ignored the Japanese ultimatum concerning Tientsin. German merchantmen in Japanese ports were given five days of grace in which to discharge their cargoes and seek refuge. The days of grace expired September 5. Such action was a reversion of the old principles of the status of merchantmen. It was not followed by European nations.

A Hague convention relating to the status of merchant ships on the outbreak of hostilities exists, but it was signed neither by the United States nor by Germany, and so far as could be ascertained from a search of authorities, no definite treaty or convention between the two nations bears on this point.

The action of Germany in regard to British ships is full of interest and meaning. Under date of August 1, Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for foreign affairs in the British cabinet, telegraphed Sir E. Goetsen, British ambassador in Berlin, as follows: "We are informed that the author-ities at Hamburg have forcibly detained steamers belonging to the Great Central Company and other British merchant ships."

No Ground For Detention
"I cannot ascertain on what grounds the detention of British ships has been ordered."

"You should request German government to send immediate orders that they should be allowed to proceed without delay. The effect on public opinion here will be deplorable unless this is done. His Majesty's government, on their side, are most anxious to avoid any incident of an aggressive nature, and the German government will, I hope, be equally careful not to take any step which will make the situation between us impossible."

The same day this reply was received by Sir Edward Grey from Sir E. Goetsen.
Detention of British ships at Hamburg.

"Your telegram of 1st August acted on."
"Secretary of state, who expressed the greatest surprise and annoyance, has promised to send orders at once to allow steamers to proceed without delay."

The next day Germany and Russia were declared to be in a state of war, and this telegram came from Sir E. Goetsen.

"Secretary of state informs me that orders were sent last night to allow British ships in Hamburg to proceed on their way. He says that this must be regarded as a special favor to His Majesty's (the British) government, as no other foreign ships have been allowed to leave. Reason of detention was that mines were being laid and other precautions taken."

Sugar Is Confiscated
Nevertheless, there were these telegrams of August 2: the first from Sir Edward Grey to Sir E. Goetsen: "Your telegram of 1st August."

"I regret to learn that 100 tons of sugar was compulsorily unloaded from the British steamship Sappho at Hamburg and detained. Similar action appears to have been taken with regard to other British vessels loaded with sugar."

the gun. Not only does it reduce the initial cost, but it facilitates the working of the gun.

"The construction of the modern gun is based upon the same lines as the construction of the internal combustion engine, so much so that even the designers of internal combustion engines become designers of large guns. The big gun is practically a cylinder with a piston in it, but with this difference from the engine—that the gun piston is the projectile itself. Also, like the engine, guns must be cooled by water and oil. Shoots Big or Small Shells.

"Another important feature of this latest gun and one which has not been generally appreciated is that it is possible to use projectiles of different caliber. For long-distance firing a smaller projectile is used, while for attacking fortresses at shorter ranges the large fifty-centimeter caliber projectile can be used. This is managed by the use of different cylinders. Let us say that the fifty-centimeter gun is built for firing missiles of three different sizes. It is evident that a projectile of about twelve-inch caliber was fired in the long-distance attack upon Dunkirk. At the present state of gun firing ability that is the largest sized projectile which can reasonably be fired for such a long distance. The heavier weight of the larger projectile makes a carrying distance of twenty-three miles impossible now."
